Frontend-GNOME: chat list shrinkage support (closes: #914)

Allow the chat list to be shrunken by truncating the end of the chat name. The default size of the chat list is now 1/6 of the window with.

<pre>

18:03:12 <meebey> Beener: is that a tablet? I am surprised by the ratio/size

18:03:26 <Beener> Portrait monitor

18:03:34 <meebey> Beener: in that case it is a real layout issue and needs to be addressed

18:03:38 <Beener> I use irc in portrait mode

18:03:48 <Beener> I can expand it

18:03:56 <Beener> but shrinking is a no go

18:03:59 <meebey> Beener: can you create a ticket for that issue? "chat list taking too much space and is not shrinkable"

18:04:09 <Beener> I assume it is forced to show the full name of each connection

18:04:14 <Beener> sure no problem

18:04:30 <Beener> should I add the alt as a feture request?

18:04:34 <meebey> yes, there is no code that tries to cut too long labels or adds vertical scrollbar...

another option would be to share the chat list and user list in the same vertical slot (as an option or auto-detection if the chat list becomes too big and has to show scrollbars)

12/18/2013 06:21 PM - Mirco Bauer

both left would be both full lists next to each other

I like the option to have them in the same column (i miss the user list being on the left) but having the column re sizable would be a plus.
